Hi 10.2.e

Humble apologies for this very long delay – I guess my summer holiday got in the way.

I need to explain this case a bit.

Originally, Switzerland imported these specimens declaring Mali as origin of the specimens, but we only discovered this after we approved import of offspring from Switzerland declared as "C". As the species only occurs on the Saudi Arabian Peninsula, I think we quite rightly questioned the legality of the original CH import. We therefore requested CH to declare their original import as null and void, which would have provided us with the legal instrument to also declare our import from CH as null and void. Because CH declined to do this, we had no legal leg to stand on to refuse further trade with the imported specimens. So the Austrian breeder BRW a competent breeder but with dubious trade behaviour, is free to trade his offspring to other EU countries, which he is obviously doing. He has just produced another batch of over 20 offspring. We are keeping a close eye on him but there is nothing we can do in this case.

I hope this helps.

Kind regards

Dear colleagues,

We received an application for the export of 8 Uromastyx princeps, with an Austrian origin.

Are you able to tell me whether BRW is a well known breeder with the species Uromastyx princeps and whether the breeding of the specimens meet the requirements for specimens born and bred in captivity (source code C) according to the Art. 54 of the Commission Regulation (EC) No. 865/2006.

Please find attached the transfer documents of the mentioned breeder to BRW in the Netherlands.

With kind regards,

10.2.e
